

E-BLA (Experience-Based Learning Association (Australasia)) has been established this year to promote discussion and investigation into the practices and theory of experience-based learning.

The first activity is an inaugural conference to be held at the University of Technology in Sydney between December 7th and 9th 2009.

The EBLA 2009 Organising Committee invites proposals for papers, workshops and poster sessions for its inaugural conference.

Where has your learning and teaching journey taken you, across the highlands, in the marshes and swamps, across fragile eco-systems or into an entirely new terrain?

We invite you to share your stories of theory and practice in experience-based learning. Themes include:

Experience -based learning in professional practice

Bridging the theory and practice gap

Identifying the shoulders we stand on. Making explicit the theorists/practitioners who have influenced and shaped your practice as an experience based learning practitioner.

Accepted Papers, Workshops and Poster submissions will form the major part of the conference program. They will be of a high professional standard and refereed by a committee of authorities in this field.

Information about submission of proposals is available at www.e-bla.com

Please email Megan Le Clus (megan.leclus@curtin.edu.au) to register your interest or to be added to our mailing list.