

Creative Life Matters

A creative development workshop - (12:00 p.m. – 5:45 p.m.)

Saturday 30 November 2013

Dr Cathryn Lloyd creative development coach and Principal of Maverick Minds invites you to a half-day workshop.

- Are you looking to bring more creativity into your personal and professional world?
- Are you looking for more creative purpose?
- What is your connection to creativity and work?
- How can you work more creatively on your projects?
- Do you see creative development as an important component in your life?

If you find yourself asking these and other questions this workshop can help shift your thinking.

The invitation is to spend a few hours working individually and collectively to explore what creativity means to you. It is an opportunity to find ways to take control over how, when, what and where you will create. The focus is to tap into your creative potential - regardless of the work you do. A range of creative processes designed to access individual creativity will be used. This is an opportunity for you to see your creative self and your projects through another lens.

Cathryn is the Principal of Maverick Minds a consultancy that designs, facilitates, and coaches powerful and flexible learning experiences for a range of people and purposes. She holds a research doctorate in Creative Industries and knows the joys and challenges of living a creative life. Cathryn works from the premise that everyone is intrinsically creative and we all have a need to express that in different ways. Creativity is a human capacity that can be applied to many different situations and challenges and for creating opportunities.

Some comments from previous workshop participants:

Insightful, positive, affirming, thought provoking, great balance of structure and experiential, fantastic, fun

What to bring:

An open heart, an open mind and your curiosity

A camera

A journal and pen

Comfortable/very casual clothes and a cushion/sarong/blanket

Workshop materials will be supplied. However please bring any materials, objects, or images you may be working with and would like to experiment with and include in your exploration.
